Comments: Professor Stoutenburg is always willing to help students outside of class, even after office hours. He is also patient with students who do not understand the material and tries his best to explain the material until it is understood. Professor Stoutenburg is an excellent example of all the professors at U of I, who are committed to see their students prosper and succeed in class.

7. What were some positive aspects of the course that supported learning? Some aspects I found helpful were the examples given during class, discussing the different concepts we learned in class, and objections to the different concepts.

8. What aspects and/or content of the course could be improved to better support learning? Hmmm not sure. Although I found some of the concepts difficult to understand, I believe this course was set-up in a manner which helped support learning. Besides, it would be almost impossible to avoid being confused in a philosophy class. As long as students apply themselves to the material and ask for help when needed, then it should be an easy class to pass.

Comments: Whenever I had questions about the material or wanted advice for my philosophy papers, Dr. Stoutenburg was always happy to answer my questions and provide advice. His explanations were insightful and increased my understanding of the material. Dr. Stoutenburg was also very responsive to questions over email, and I really appreciated the effort he put in to make sure we understood the material well.

7. What were some positive aspects of the course that supported learning? Greg was very open to talking to students outside of class if they didn't understand something. This was very helpful. If you could not make office hours you could call him on the phone and he was happy to discuss the topic there. He also facilitated a good class discussion that aided the learning of the class.

Comments: I enjoy that we can pick what to argue for in our essays. I find it very helpful for me to do my best work when I can write about topics that I am invested in.

7. What were some positive aspects of the course that supported learning? The instructor was able to defend various viewpoints and could mask what his personal views are. However, he also showed great confidence and courage to state and defend his own personal view when they were asked or relevant.

8. What aspects and/or content of the course could be improved to better support learning? I think doing projects like the instructor did for environmental philosophy, where the students got to go out into nature to reflect philosophically would also be helpful in this class. I feel that showing people how to use philosophical reasoning outside of school would help stimulate non philosophy majors to engage more.
